Anduril Industries
Early Career Talent, Business Operations
Washington, D.C.

Dear Selection Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the 2027 Early Career Business Operations Associate position at Anduril Industries. My policy work has shown me how often national security outcomes depend less on what the government wants than on how quickly industry can deliver it. Anduril's commitment to fielding capability in months rather than years is a direct answer to that problem. A business operations role that helps leadership make faster, better-informed decisions is where I want to start my career.

At Holland & Knight, supporting the co-leads of the firm's National Security & Defense industry sector group taught me how defense programs, budgets, and supply-chain constraints interact, and how a single regulatory change can ripple through a company's operations. Briefing practice group leaders and former Members of Congress taught me what executives need: the conclusion first, the trade-offs stated honestly, and only the evidence that changes the decision. I approach every analysis by asking what decision it is meant to inform. I believe that discipline translates directly to the dashboards and executive narratives this role produces.

I am also drawn to the operational side of the work. Working the teller line at Georgetown's student-run credit union gave me an appreciation for how a real institution runs: controls, reconciliations, and small process failures that compound if no one owns them. As co-founder and Treasurer of two Georgetown organizations, I built our budgeting and tracking processes from nothing, which taught me that good operations are designed, not inherited. I am eager to deepen my Excel modeling and learn the enterprise tools Anduril's teams rely on, and I learn fastest by being handed real problems.

I would be proud to contribute to Anduril's mission with ownership and a bias for action. Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to Anduril's business operations.

Sincerely,
Adeline Bean
