Lockheed Martin Space
Government Relations (Strategy & Business Development)
Littleton, Colorado

Dear Selection Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Government Relations Representative Associate position with the Lockheed Martin Space Government Relations team. I want to start my career where public policy and national security meet, and few places sit closer to that intersection than a space business whose work depends on steady relationships with federal, state, and local officials. This role's description as a foundation for a career in public policy, government relations, and advocacy is exactly the path I hope to build.

My interest in defense and space policy grew out of my work at Holland & Knight, where I support the co-leads of the firm's National Security & Defense industry sector group. Watching how defense-industry clients engage with Congress and agencies taught me that government relations is less about a single meeting than about the preparation and follow-through around it: knowing who the stakeholder is, what they care about, and what they need to see before they will listen. Earlier, in Representative DeGette's office, I saw the same relationship from the government side, and I learned how much a well-organized, respectful outreach effort matters to busy staff.

I also understand that much of this job is the work behind the scenes, and I enjoy it. Sponsorships, tradeshows, tours, budgets, and a clean CRM are what allow a government relations team to show up prepared. When I co-founded Georgetown's Women in Law Club and Undergraduate Law Journal, I built the budget, calendars, and tracking systems from scratch, and as Treasurer I still keep them running. Working at Georgetown's student-run credit union reinforced the same habits of accuracy and controls. I would bring that reliability to supporting the Stakeholder Engagement team and its events.

I would be proud to help represent Lockheed Martin Space to the officials and organizations that shape the future of national security space, and to grow into a trusted advocate for the company. Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to your team.

Sincerely,
Adeline Bean
