Invenergy
Development Team
Denver, CO

Dear Selection Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Analyst, Development position at Invenergy in Denver. Building the power infrastructure the country needs depends on more than good sites and good engineering; it depends on earning the trust of landowners, local officials, and communities, and on navigating the permits and public processes that decide whether a project moves forward. That is the part of energy development I most want to learn, and Invenergy's track record of actually building projects is why I am drawn to your team.

At Holland & Knight, I research legislation and regulatory guidance and turn it into clear analysis for attorneys and policy advisors, and I have learned to read the underlying rules carefully before drawing conclusions, because the details are usually where a project succeeds or stalls. Working on constituent casework in Representative DeGette's office taught me how to work patiently with government agencies, keep track of every open item, and follow up until a request is actually resolved, which I expect is much of what securing local and state permits requires.

My work with refugee families at the International Rescue Committee taught me how to listen to people whose priorities differ from mine and to coordinate many parties toward a single outcome. I would bring that same approach to landowner conversations and community outreach. I am new to the technical side of project development, but I learn quickly by working alongside experts, and I am eager to grow into market assessments, pricing, and interconnection work under your team's guidance.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I would be excited to help Invenergy advance its projects in the region, and I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to your Development team.

Sincerely,
Adeline Bean
