Brex
Banking Operations, Domestic Payments
New York, NY

Dear Selection Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Analyst, Banking Operations position on Brex's Domestic Payments team in New York. Reliable money movement is something most customers notice only when it goes wrong, and I am drawn to a role whose whole purpose is making sure it does not. Brex's combination of banking, cards, and modern software, now backed by Capital One, is the kind of place where I hope to learn how financial infrastructure really works.

My interest in banking operations began behind the counter at Georgetown's student-run credit union, where I work as a teller and marketing intern. Handling members' money every day taught me that precision is a form of respect: every transaction should balance, every procedure exists for a reason, and anything unusual should be raised quickly and explained clearly. I have also learned to explain account and payment questions in plain language, so members understand what happened and what happens next, which I see as the heart of resolving a case well.

My policy internships have strengthened the same habits from another angle. At Holland & Knight, I research financial services, banking, and payments developments and turn them into concise briefings for attorneys and former Members of Congress, keeping careful trackers so nothing is missed. In Representative DeGette's office, I handled casework that required following up with federal agencies and documenting every step until each matter was closed. I use AI tools to work faster but always validate the output against the source, and I am eager to build my skills with payment rails, return codes, and the data tools your team uses.

I would be excited to help keep Brex customers' funds safe, timely, and accounted for, and to grow within an operations team that values both rigor and continuous improvement. Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to the Domestic Payments team.

Sincerely,
Adeline Bean
