FTP (Forbes Tate Partners)
Government Relations, Research and Policy Analysis
Washington, D.C.

Dear Selection Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Analyst position on FTP's Research and Policy Analysis team. I want to begin my career at the point where research becomes advocacy, and FTP's model, in which careful political intelligence drives messaging and strategy for clients, is exactly the kind of work I hope to master. I am also drawn to FTP's bipartisan culture and its expectation that everyone rolls up their sleeves, which is how I have approached every team I have joined.

My Justice and Peace studies at Georgetown taught me to ask how institutions actually make decisions, and my internships have let me watch that process up close. At Holland & Knight, I follow Congress, the Administration, and federal agencies across energy, national security, financial services, and technology. That range has taught me to get up to speed quickly on unfamiliar issues: I start with the primary source, whether a bill, a hearing record, or a proposed rule, and then figure out what a busy reader needs to know first. Writing for senior partners and former Members of Congress has shown me that the most valuable research is short, accurate, and honest about what remains uncertain.

I am especially excited by the weekly newsletter that summarizes Congress and the Administration for all of FTP's clients and staff. Producing recurring updates has taught me the discipline of a consistent format, a firm deadline, and a habit of double-checking every fact before it goes out. In Representative DeGette's office, I learned how the Hill works from the inside, from committee schedules to how staff weigh the information they receive. I use AI tools to speed up research and summarizing while verifying everything against the original sources, and I have led peers as a co-founder and executive editor of two student organizations, which I would draw on when guiding RPA interns.

I would be excited to help FTP's Government Relations team see around corners for its clients and to grow within a firm that values both rigorous analysis and creative advocacy. Thank you for your time and consideration. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to the Research and Policy Analysis team.

Sincerely,
Adeline Bean
