AHIP
State Affairs & Policy
Washington, D.C.

Dear Selection Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Legal and Regulatory Analyst position on AHIP's State Affairs and Policy team. So much of the health coverage that Americans rely on is shaped in state capitols and insurance departments, and I am drawn to a team that follows that work across every region and turns it into clear, timely guidance for its members. The chance to support State Regional Directors and the State Strategy Team while learning the substance of health insurance regulation is exactly the kind of foundation I hope to build my career on.

At Holland & Knight, my core job is following legislation and regulation and explaining what it means to people who need to act on it. I read bills, rules, and agency notices, compare them to existing law, and write memos that tell attorneys and policy advisors what has changed, who is affected, and what questions remain open. Working alongside partners on client alerts taught me to write precisely for a professional audience and to revise until a document holds up to an expert reader. I have also learned to keep tracking systems current so a colleague can pick up any issue and know exactly where it stands.

State policy is not new to me. Before Georgetown, I spent a summer at the National Endowment for Financial Education following financial literacy legislation across many states, which showed me how ideas move from one legislature to the next and why consistent, well-organized tracking matters. In Representative DeGette's office, I researched health care and public health legislation for legislative staff and saw how much policymakers depend on accurate information from outside organizations. At Georgetown's student-run credit union, I explain policies to members every day, which has made me comfortable translating complex rules into plain language. Co-founding Georgetown's Undergraduate Law Journal sharpened my editing and my ability to manage many deadlines at once.

I would be excited to draft bill analyses, policy briefs, one-pagers, and legislative updates, help prepare comment letters and talking points, keep AHIP's tracking records and template library current, and support the team's work with member companies and state partners. Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to your team.

Sincerely,
Adeline Bean
