Coinflow
Product Team
Chicago, IL

Dear Selection Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Product Operations and Strategy Associate position at Coinflow. Stablecoin payments are moving from an experiment to real financial infrastructure, and that shift depends on companies that can earn the trust of banks, partners, and regulators. I am drawn to a role that sits at the center of that trust-building work, keeping due diligence answers accurate, requests organized, and teams aligned, while learning how a fast-growing payments company builds and ships products.

At Holland & Knight, I research financial services, banking, and digital asset developments and write memos for attorneys and policy advisors, so I am comfortable with the regulatory vocabulary that appears in partner and bank questionnaires. Just as important, I have learned the operational habits that keep a busy team working smoothly. I track open requests with clear owners and due dates, follow up before deadlines slip, and keep documents and versions organized so the right answer can be found and reused quickly. When a question needs a specialist, I route it with enough context that the expert can answer it once.

I also understand payments from the front line. At Georgetown's student-run credit union, a fully operational financial institution, I process deposits, withdrawals, and transfers, follow written procedures and identity verification controls, and escalate exceptions carefully. That experience taught me why compliance processes exist and how they protect customers and partners alike. My economics and political science coursework, along with casework in Representative DeGette's office where I coordinated with federal agencies and tracked each case to completion, strengthened my attention to detail and follow-through. I also use AI tools daily to speed up research and drafting, always checking the output against reliable sources.

I would be excited to own Coinflow's due diligence workflow and answer library, keep Linear organized, write clear release notes and updates, and research questions for the Head of Product. Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to your team.

Sincerely,
Adeline Bean
