Brooks Bawden Moore, LLC
Government Affairs
Washington, D.C.

Dear Selection Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Government Affairs Associate position at Brooks Bawden Moore. My studies in Justice and Peace at Georgetown have centered on a question that sits at the heart of your practice: how communities can be kept safe in ways that are effective, fair, and worthy of public trust. Advocating for the people who investigate crimes, respond to emergencies, and support rehabilitation and reentry is work I would find deeply meaningful, and I am drawn to a small, bipartisan firm where an associate learns directly from partners and public safety leaders.

At Holland & Knight, much of my day is the work this role describes. I follow hearings, markups, floor activity, appropriations, and new bill introductions, decide what matters for each client, and write updates that explain the implications, the deadlines, and the recommended next step. Supporting the co-leads of the firm's National Security and Defense industry sector group has given me a close look at homeland security and federal funding questions, and preparing read-ahead memos and talking points before client meetings has taught me that a partner walking into a congressional office needs a clear, accurate page more than a long one. I also keep trackers for several attorneys, so I understand why commitments and follow-up items need a reliable home.

My time on Capitol Hill shaped how I think about advocacy. In Representative DeGette's office, I watched staff weigh what constituents, advocates, and agencies told them, and I learned that the most persuasive voices were the ones that were consistently prepared, accurate, and respectful of everyone's time. Earlier, as a casework intern at the International Rescue Committee, I helped families navigate housing, healthcare, and identification systems, which showed me how much good policy depends on the people who carry it out on the ground. Co-founding Georgetown's Undergraduate Law Journal taught me to manage edits, approvals, and deadlines across many contributors, a skill that carries over directly to sign-on letters and a weekly newsletter.

I would be excited to monitor congressional and agency activity, prepare clients for meetings, draft alerts and position papers, coordinate correspondence, and help produce the BBM Weekly Update. Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to your team.

Sincerely,
Adeline Bean
