Harley-Davidson Motor Company
Government Affairs
Washington, D.C.

Dear Selection Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Government Affairs Associate position at Harley-Davidson. Few American companies sit at as many policy crossroads as Harley-Davidson: a manufacturer whose products are shaped by trade and tariff decisions, vehicle and emissions standards, tax policy, and the shift toward electric vehicles, all while it serves a loyal community of riders and dealers across the country and abroad. I am drawn to the chance to help an iconic brand explain its priorities to policymakers, and to a role built around research, early awareness of emerging issues, and close support for the experts who lead the company's advocacy.

At Holland & Knight, my work centers on spotting what matters before it becomes urgent. I follow legislation, regulatory actions, and agency guidance on trade, manufacturing, supply chains, transportation, and energy, and I write updates that explain what changed, who is affected, and what a client should consider doing next. Supporting the co-leads of the firm's National Security and Defense industry sector group has shown me how industrial-base and supply chain questions move through Congress and the agencies. Preparing talking points and background materials before meetings with policymakers has taught me that a subject-matter expert walks into a room with more confidence when the research behind them is accurate, concise, and anticipates the hard questions.

My time on Capitol Hill shaped how I think about advocacy. In Representative DeGette's office, I researched energy, environment, consumer protection, and transportation legislation and watched how staff weighed the views of companies, advocates, and constituents. The voices that carried the most weight were the ones that were well prepared, candid about tradeoffs, and reliable in following up. At Georgetown's credit union, I have also learned to translate rules into plain language for members and to handle sensitive information with discretion, and as co-founder and treasurer of Georgetown's Undergraduate Law Journal and Women in Law Club, I have learned to keep a governing team organized, documented, and on schedule.

I would be excited to monitor policy developments, track emerging issues across Harley-Davidson's key markets, develop research and content for advocacy campaigns, and support the government affairs team and its governance work. Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to your team.

Sincerely,
Adeline Bean
